Ankereo (Nosy Fasy)

The fishermen of Andavadoaka signed a Dina on 24th October to close Ankereo to octopus fishing for 6 months from 1st November 2004. The fishermen, village elders, Blue Ventures and WCS worked together to produce the Dina because the fishermen and sous-collecteurs noticed that the amount of octopus and the weights of individual octopus caught decreased during 2003 and 2004.

To develop the Dina Blue Ventures and WCS met with villagers and fishermen on three days starting on the 22nd October 2004. Fisherwomen, fishermen and village elders at the meetings discussed why the octopus were getting smaller and how a Dina could help to manage the problem.

In the meetings, fishermen decided the penalties and regulations for octopus: any juvenile octopus, one smaller than 500g, should be released when caught and any fishermen possessing an octopus caught illegally from Ankereo would be fined five times the market value of the octopus.

Below you can see the Dina for Ankereo and the signatures of the fishermen who helped to protect the future economy of Andavadoaka by signing this law.

On 31st October the fishing cooperative, which is helping to manage Ankereo, bought a zebu that was sacrificed to celebrate the opening of the marine protected area. Cooperative Maritime du 22ieme Parallel is helping to manage the protected area by paying a guardian to ensure that the Dina is not broken.

Blue Ventures looks forward to presenting the results of monitoring the change in size of octopus caught to villagers later this year - 1st June 2005, after Ankereo is open to octopus fishing again.
